About myself

I had studied different technical subjects, but the most perspective and interesting areas for me are related to analytics, finance, and IT. I like to constantly evolve and learn something new, so link my future with these spheres is the best solution.

I have about half a year of freelance experience as a react-developer, a half-year full-time experience as an analytic seller, a little experience as a team lead in university tasks, and over the past year, I have been involved in the maintenance and development of the software. I hope hardworking and collaborating with professionals on my way help me to create really cool products and move up the career ladder.
